Apprenticeships and Careers

Don't miss the chance to attend one of our Q&A sessions, see overleaf.

Welcome back!

We would like to wish all a happy and successful academic year.

Myth or Reality?

"Apprenticeships lead to dead-end jobs."

Apprenticeships are designed to provide training and pathways to long-term careers. Many apprenticeship programs have clear progression routes, leading to advanced roles, management positions, or entrepreneurship.

Did you know?

Apprenticeships offer a significant amount of practical, on-the-job training. You'll have the opportunity to apply what you learn in real work settings, gaining valuable experience and developing practical skills that are highly sought after by employers.

APPRENTICESHIP OF THE WEEK

STUDENT/TRAINEE NURSING ASSOCIATE

The Student Nursing Associate (SNA) (formerly known as Trainee Nursing Associate) is an excellent way to advance a career in nursing. To meet the entry requirements candidates must have completed a year as a Band 2 Healthcare Assistant/Support Worker or as a Level 2 Apprentice Healthcare Assistant and have received the Care Certificate. The apprenticeship is typically a two-year program during which students work while learning on the job. They are required to complete both academic and practical components. While Nursing Associates are not registered nurses, they can perform many nursing tasks and play a vital role in patient care. Having completed this apprenticeship however students can then go on to train to become a registered nurse.

For more information regarding SNAs at Gloucestershire Hospitals please contact samantha.lignelli@nhs.net or elizabeth.abraham4@nhs.net, or for information regarding Gloucestershire Health and Care contact apprenticeships@ghc.nhs.uk.

CAREER OF THE WEEK

CLINICAL PHOTOGRAPHY

A career in clinical photography combines the fields of healthcare and photography to document medical conditions, surgeries, research, and other healthcare-related activities. Clinical photographers play a crucial role in healthcare by capturing high-quality images and videos for various purposes, including patient records, education, research, and presentations. In order to get into such a career you will need to be proficient in photography with a knowledge of camera equipment, have precise and accurate attention to detail. Good communication skills are vital too as you will work closely with other medical professionals and patients. Challenges on the job may be that working in medical environments can often be emotionally challenging and that you will need to take great care to maintain patient privacy - complying to legislation such as GDPR.
