Apprenticeships and Careers

Myth or Reality?

"I can't do an apprenticeship and work full time"

Apprenticeships are a vocational way to train and are completed alongside your current job role. No need to take career breaks or leave employment to train. Apprenticeships are also fully funded so won't cost you a penny! You will need to complete some of the academic work in your own time.

Did you know?

This month is Stress Awareness Month. On the Stress Management Society website they have a number of resources including an Individual Stress Test to help you work out your stress level as well as guides on how to reduce burdens etc., manage your stress and live better.

APPRENTICE AND MENTOR OF THE MONTH

Have you noticed on our social media that the Apprenticeship and Careers Team awards Apprentice and Mentor of the Month? This is to recognise some of those who have made a particularly outstanding contribution on their wards and departments and have therefore been nominated by either their apprentice or mentor to win an award. Here are just a few of our winners from previous months:

Ella, Cardiology

Peter, Procurement

Keeley, Therapy

Emma, Ward 5A

APPRENTICESHIP OF THE WEEK

MEDICAL ADMINISTRATOR

Medical Administrators are involved with providing administrative and secretarial support to various departments and wards around the Trust. On a day to day basis they will provide an efficient, friendly and confidential service to customers, patients and internal staff, will record patient attendance, ensure the public image of the department remains professional. They will also deal with all incoming enquiries through telephone and email, file patient records and enter information electronically where necessary. A successful Medical Administrator will need to be courteous and helpful, have excellent attention to detail, be able to organise work effectively and balance the workload as well as work as part of a team and alone with minimal direct supervision. They will complete a Level 3 Business Administration apprenticeship and may also gain certification in Medical Terminology. A great way to start a career in administration which could set you on a pathway to roles such as Policy Officer or in business management.

CAREER OF THE WEEK

LIBRARY ASSISTANT

Library Assistants are generally involved with supporting customers and service users in a library environment through tasks such as helping them access and print resources, organising IT access and answering queries, checking materials in and out at the front desk, cataloguing new resources, shelving returned items and maintaining databases and records. You could enter this role through a Library and Information Services Assistant advanced apprenticeship (Level 3). These take 18 months to complete. Alternatively, you may apply for a permanent role if you have prior experience in an administrative, customer service or IT role, or even better first hand experience of working in a library. You can also gain experience by volunteering or doing work experience in your local library which will be invaluable for any application. Successful Library Assistants will need to have outstanding written and verbal communication, be friendly and polite to all service users, be excellent team players and have thorough attention to detail. You could progress onwards to become a librarian or library manager.

Feedback from one of our T Level students:

"I really enjoyed my first day, everyone was welcoming. It was a nice experience to see how things are done and I even got the chance to take someone's observations." - Kimberley
